Suggested Fonts List

This is a list of some fonts our designers have available to use when designing your book. This is only a sample of some of the most popular fonts; they have thousands of others to choose from as well. For your convenience, we have marked each font as being appropriate for body text or display text.

Body Text fonts are meant for the main body text of your book—paragraphs, lists, etc. These fonts are designed to be easier on the eyes for smoother reading.

Display Text fonts are meant for chapter titles, subtitles, etc. They are often "fancier" fonts, such as script or handwriting. We advise against using these as main body text, as they are intended for short strings of text and can become difficult to read in long paragraphs.

B = Body Text: Fonts meant for the main body text of your book.
D = Display Text: Fonts meant for chapter titles, etc. We advise against using these as main body text, as they are intended for short strings of text and can become difficult to read in long paragraphs.
